I've been playing the lottery from scratch for many years in California and other states. I have spent a lot of money playing scratchers and managing games. Before this app I probably threw away a lot of winning tickets because after getting an app I was able to scan the barcode for another chance thinking they were losers and find out that I won. The opportunity to enter the second chance drawing probably increases sales because we like to play and want to win that we play. I'm really hopeful that I'm a second chance winner. One thing I'm not clear about how the players are reported as winners. I don't know how it works if my name is drawn by the winner, but I try to remember to check the list of my name. So if your reading of it and looking for a very fun person choose the winner here I am. Thanks and happy New Year. Brendan Nestor After much painstaking attempts to change your password because he decided that it would not take me anymore ... unconnected user interface. I checked my account details, as requested on 2 May 2015. All the information was of course the same that I hit Save only to get a new message telling me that I could only have 1 account. I only have 1 account. No help to the website how they think I have more than 1 account if they already have my info. Then I was given an email that my information must be verified manually and .... Take this... I should send a copy of my ID and copy the rent/utility/mortgage payment.... unknown people so I can play, yes play, 2. Say what?!? Then they destroy these copies to protect my identity. Um... You're all aware of what not to do to get your identity stolen, right? Why do I have to confirm my identity, which you've already done before I win anything? Why I should send unknown people my identity information If it's in their hands for the first time, why shouldn't it be there when it's being held... Because it's not safe to go there, and it's not safe to stay there. Somebody should look into it. I want to love this app, but there are some serious drawbacks. First of all, I lose all the time. It's not fun. Come to the California Lottery, just let me win from time to time, enough to keep my hopes and dreams afloat. Second, some might call it perk, but it oppresses me. The app is lightened quickly when it scans my ticket and tells me I'm not a winner. Come on, come on. At least take a few seconds to think about what you're going to tell me. Heartache. Every time. Instantly. Here are some ideas for improvement:1) Don't be so darn fast. As is the hourglass, which flips around a few times or some bars that flash over the screen and suggests that you're actually thinking about my ticket. I need the last few moments to dream of the house I'm building. Stop breaking my hopes so fast. 2) It's not fun. I want voices or music or something. Like a drum roll or some great music. Then, when I lose, (as always do) I want to hear the sad sounds like wa-wa-waaaa followed by a maybe hopeful prompt to buy again hopeful sounds. Come on, California Lottery. I know I have a greater chance of getting hit by the actual lightning if I win the lottery so make the experience worth my $2. I've spent decades planning how I'm going to blow up all this money. Add some bloom already to enhance your dreams. Thanks for the semi-faithful ticket buyer and always optimistic lottery life planner-outer.
